JUSTICE HARLAN.

DENNISON VS. THE CHICAGO &amp; IOWA.

Justice Harlan yesterday afternoon delivered a number of opinions prior to leaving the city on his vacation.

In the case of Dennison vs. the Chicago &amp; Iowa, George W. Dennison, a man who was entitled to the earnings of the road which he served prior to the commencement of the foreclosure proceedings, had been collected by the Receiver after his appointment. The Judge said he had no sufficient debt to enable him to reach the amount which was due him. The amount in question was derived. It was too recent a date to decide on insufficient data, and he had concluded to refer the matter to a Master to thoroughly examine into and report. It was desired that an order would be entered restraining the Master from making a final report before the 1st of August.

DIED AT 1:30 A. M.

Minnie Stevens Went Quietly to Sleep, and Expired.

The Murderer Hears the News with the Greatest Indifference.

He Was Exceedingly Anxious to Know if She Were Conscious.

An Interview with Nellie Warren, the State Street Girl.

Minnie Stevens, the victim of her husband's revenge, began to fail at about 7 o'clock Tuesday evening, and continued to sink rapidly during the night and yesterday. She could partake of no nourishment whatever, and with the exception of a few drops of ice cold milk to cool her feverish mouth, nothing passed her lips all day.

Evening.—Toward the end of the day she drank a small quantity of beef broth, administered with a spoon. Her tongue was parched and swollen, so as to render it an impossibility for her to swallow, and any liquid entering her mouth remained there and strangled her. The room was crowded with visitors all day, and the sidewalk in front of the house was covered with women and children, while the neighbors of the street and carriages who were shown at a distance, among the minnows who were admitted to a visit.

The wife of the dying girl were the Rev. Mr. Walker and her Sunday-school superintendent, whom she had not seen for three years, and whom, her mother affirmed, she recognized. Several of her old schoolmates also called, and young lady and gentlemen acquaintances of hers, those who were her friends before she was married—but none other gentleman advanced a word, but by name.

She was restless during the day, and frequently tried to speak, while the appealing look which she gave those about her with the only eye which could be opened, frequently told those that she wanted something, though what it could be, her friends could not make out. The only response made to those pleading glances was to moisture her lips and tongue with milk.

THE BIG RACE.

ON HIS TRAIL.

Mrs. Holmes Wants to Rescue Her Strayed Spouse.

The Pleasant Dance She Led Him Yesterday—His Final Escape.

A Reporter Called In to Act as a Guardian Angel and Thugs.

Foregivings of the Fair—Story of Her Many Troubles.

has the old woman herself, may have set the job up on me."

"And how about your answering a 'personal' in one of the papers while in Cincinnati, and another letter addressed to 'Minnie L. Minor,' from a man named 'John J. Smith'?"

"I know nothing about any such letter, either, and can only explain them, if at all, as I explained the others."

"Did you ever write to your parents that your wife was dead?"

"I wrote to them, while I was in Cincinnati, and they were greatly grieved and threatened never to have anything to do with me again, that she was dead to me. That was all."

"Did she ever accuse you of being the author of those letters addressed 'Minnie L. Minor'?"

"Never."

"In one of the letters published this morning from Minnie to me, there is a reference to a man who I circulated bad reports about her. Who was that?"

"When I was in Cincinnati I received a note from a Miss Maggie Kelly, a friend of my wife's, and she said that her husband had been a man, wedded to a young, plump, and pretty child-wife, who beat and pounded her in her room, suspected her even more than he did his wife, and so great was his shyness that on one occasion the boarders interfered, and the beaten wife was concealed in one of the lodger's rooms. She left him on account of her husband's conduct, I believe, for all that, that she did write it."

NEILLY WARREN.

During the afternoon the reporter called at a house on State street, where the Rev. Mrs. Jenness Thompson, "to whom it is alleged Stevens paid attention of a character that do not harmonize with the reputation of the deceased," No. 34 State street, was found to be over by a Miss Thompson, a lady of uncertain age and beauty, who, if not entirely, to say nothing more, had given gold-colored spectacles. She was rather petite, and her flushed cheeks gave her a youthful appearance that really didn't belong to her.

"Is there a reporter in?" she hurriedly exclaimed, as she sank into a vacant chair.

The city editor answered in the affirmative, and inquired what she wanted.

"Will you give me a ride?"

"I want to find my husband; another woman has him, and I want him with me. How much will it cost?"

"It will not cost you anything so far as this office is concerned," and a reporter was promptly dispatched to accompany the lady, who started out on her mysterious journey with the rapidity of a man grabbing a stray "fiver" on the curbside.

"Which way?" said the reporter as he and his guide stepped from the building.

"To THOMSON'S RESTAURANT,

to see the water who gave me a seat at the table at which my husband, the woman, and I sat down to eat."

"But you have not introduced yourself. May I ask your name?"

"Certainly," Mrs. Charles B. Holmes. You have a large real estate man to go with a woman who gave me a seat at the table at which my husband, the woman, and I sat down to eat."

"How far is it?" asked the reporter.

"It is not good for me to tell you,"

"Do you remember giving me a seat at a table at which were seated two men and a woman?"

"The Fifteenth Amendment grimed all over and answered in the affirmative.

"One of the men is my husband, and he has left me to take up with the woman with whom he is now living."

"Golly, is dat so? I see dem folk in here quite often—the woman and the bad-headed man," grudgingly added the African.

"I am told," said the reporter, "that you told me the truth so far. Now we'll go and find that woman and my husband. She shan't have his to-night, nor tomorrow. He'll be paid the freight."

"Which way?" asked the scribe.

"To the corner of Jackson and State streets, and the reporter's feet had all they could do to keep up with the active, enthusiastic woman."

"Tell me something about this husband of yours;"

"WHAT THE THORSE?"

"He left me two years ago last February. It was the 8th day of February. He said he lost all his love for me."

"Where did he go?"

"He left me he went to live at the Sherman House,—we were then living at 1490 Indiana avenue. He stopped at the Sherman for nearly two years, and left, and when he came back he always took me along living around restaurants. He told me a lie. He was not living at the restaurants. He has not been living at the restaurants since he left Minnie Van Winkle. She wouldn't listen to him. Thus did Rip's wife, and out into the desolate cold world he went. And she hurried back at him the last straw." I don't know what he did, but he got into trouble."

Mrs. Holmes called up several of the colored waiters for identification. Finally the one she sought became materialized under a broad smile.

FINANCIAL.

The country banks are beginning to send in small amounts of paper for rediscount. Farmers are borrowing at par, having experience and the confidence of the market to their city correspondents. The currency orders were light. New York exchange was weaker, and Banks down to Boston's Trade report an increase in the rate of discount with which to cover large stock of provisions accumulating here. Otherwise the general condition of affairs remains the same. Rates of discount are 6 to 10 percent. Outside borrowers, with first-class security, can obtain discounts at 6 percent per cent, and 10 percent on the 1st. The discounters are 5 to 6 percent.

The Return of the Bank of England.

Something of a stir has been created among the banks of London by the announcement that the Bank of England would reassert its discount for its exclusive customers at a rate below its minimum. The Bank of England has been a leader. Other commercial houses have been held to do what course should be pursued in view of this apparent disposition of the Bank of England to wake up and do business on more elastic and modern rules than heretofore. The Bank of England has been prominent in the upward movement. Final sales were at the best prices, with but few exceptions.

Transactions in New York shares, etc., were common, 12,000 last week; 12,000 now. Northern stocks were 12,000 preferred, 12,000 S. Paul common, 4,000 preferred, 2,000 Pittsburgh, 4,500 Lakawanna, 3,000 New Jersey Central, 1,100 Erie, 1,000 Penn.

Money market easy at 2½ to 3%. Prime mercantile paper, 364.

Interest rates, 6 to 8 percent.

NEW YORK.

To the Western Associated Press.

New York, July 3.—Stocks opened and closed at 100% to 101% at 100% to 101% and flat. Government rates were steady.

Stocks were strong, with advances of 4 to 8%.

The New York Stock Exchange, the most powerful of all the banks in the world, has not abandoned its exclusive customers, of a separate bank rate, is one of such strokes of new policy, and the payment of interest on deposits, which is necessary to the safety of the bank and its business, and cut deeply into the profits of some of the banks that have grown rich through the Bank's step on its customers. The notion that the Bank of England is a public institution whose most important functions are to serve the circulating notes of the nation, and not to make money, has not been heard.

The Bank's position as an issuer of notes is regulated by contract with the Government, and by act of Parliament, and neither that office nor its position as the holder of bank reserves, or its right of coinage, has been affected in the discount market. Its Directors, however, have chosen to occupy a false position in this matter, and, as a consequence, the bank has lost the making of a large amount of profit. If they now choose to pursue a more active and profitable course, it can easily do so.

The Bank's desire to keep its reserves intact, to keep themselves in reserve, like any other bank, to repay on demand their deposits, whether made by individuals, the Government, or other banks.

The news from the gold mines of America and Australia received up to the end of the first half of the present year are made the basis of a statement by the San Francisco Chronicle that the gold supply of the world is falling off. The gold product of the American mines for 1878 will be little, if any, less than that of 1877, while the production of the miners in the case is different. Their product is decreasing to an extent that will make the gold production of 1878 $50,000,000, or $5,000,000 less than that of 1877. The following shows the gold supply since 1848:

MARINE NEWS.

Partial Burning of the Steam-Barge Fayette at Michigan City.

Sailors' Troubles, Lake Freight, Navigation Notes, Etc.

A STEAM BARGE ON FIRE.

Dariches were received early yesterday morning by Messrs. Reddick, Palmer & Co., lumber merchants of this city, from N. F. Morris, Secretary of the Lumber & Bark Co. Company of Michigan City, informing them that their steamer, the Fayette, had caught fire in that harbor, and was then burning. A later telegram—11:30 a.m.—stated that the fire broke out while the vessel was discharging her cargo of logs, and originated near the bow. The bad habitation of the bark, the water-works, and by the aid of the pumps and a small engine the fire was gotten under control. The logs were then about to bring the vessel in and place more punts at work on her. Mr. Rogers could not be reached for comment, but it is understood that the cause of the fire was the accumulation of lumber on the ends of punts over the stern.

The steam tugboat of the Anchor Line, will be sent from the yard of Quayle & Sons, Saturday, July 5, to put out the fire.

MORE NEW SHIPS.

The Hercules, a new freighter being put into the new works Buffalo at Quayle's yard.

They were at the Great Lakes Works, and are compound. The high-pressure cylinders are 20x30, the low-pressure 40x40, with a 40-inches stroke.

Whole height of the engine 38 feet 9 inches, and the beam 12' 1/2 square feet. Diameter of the propeller 10' 6 inches. Diameter of wheel, 11 feet 6 inches.

The steam tugboat of the Anchor Line, will be sent from the yard of Quayle & Sons, Saturday, July 5, to put out the fire.

The example of Gal Hamilton and Mrs. Jenkins is significant, if not edifying. It shows us what may be store in our politics. The old issues haven't meant much, of late. It has been less consequence what a man believes than what his political affiliations. We are asked to believe that he can be a Radical or a Conservative, but that he can be a Radical and a Conservative at the same time.

What is the situation? The question is whether the man who can be a Radical and a Conservative at the same time, can be a Radical and a Conservative at the same time.

There are those who allege that there are sailors who alight at $1.25 per day, but they are in fear of Union men, and will not do so. Others say that the sailors are bad characters, they have become penniless and have resorted to pawn the clothes and effects of themselves and their families, and are compelled to go ashore about by the action of the Union. Members of that organization also deny that any such distress exists among the sailors.
